

Applied Anthropology

ARCHAEOLOGICAL - BIOLOGICAL - CULTURAL - MEDICAL

Graduate Program in Applied Anthropology

Department of Anthropology

The Graduate Program in Applied Anthropology at USF aims to develop creative scholars and scientists who will apply their knowledge and skills to contemporary human problems. We balance world-class training in theory and method with practice, and link academically rigorous scholarship with practical, first-hand experience.

Applied Anthropology Faculty

Roberta Baer (disease etiology, diabetes, nutrition/diet, Latin America), Elizabeth Bird (media studies, heritage and memory studies, U.S., Nigeria), Heide Castañeda (migrant health, transnational migration, citizenship, Germany, US), Karla Davis-Salazar (pedagogy, higher education, U.S.), Tara Deubel (international development, food security, human rights, gender, forced migration, language and performance, Africa, Middle East), David Himmelgreen (nutritional anthropology, growth and development, HIV/AIDS, Southern Africa, Costa Rica, Tampa), Antoinette Jackson (sociocultural and historical anthropology, heritage studies, U.S.), Erin Kimmerle (forensic anthropology, bioarchaeology, Bosnia, Nigeria), Daniel Lende (neuroanthropology, drug addiction, Colombia), Lorena Madrigal (human demography and biology, genetics, Costa Rica), Elizabeth M Miller (immune function, maternal and infant health, nutrition, life history theory, evolutionary ecology, East Africa), John Nopora (sociocultural anthropology, North Africa, Middle East), Thomas Pluckhahn (cultural resource management, eastern U.S. prehistory), Nancy Romero-Daza (HIV/AIDS, reproductive health, Costa Rica, Lesotho, U.S.), Angela Stuesse (transnational migration, labor, U.S., Equatorial Guinea), Robert Tykot (Archaeological science, trade, ancient diets, New World and Europe/Mediterranean), Christian Wells (applied archaeology, prehistory of Mesoamerica and Central America), Nancy Marie White (eastern U.S. archaeology, theory, public archaeology and CRM), Linda Whiteford (water and sanitation, disasters, Latin America), Brent Weisman (historical and public archaeology, Southeastern U.S.), Kevin Yelvington (urban anthropology, Latin America and the Caribbean), Rebecca Zarger (environmental anthropology, Belize).

Programs Offered

- Master of Arts (M.A.)
- Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.)
- Dual degree in collaboration with the College of Public Health (M.A./M.P.H. or M.P.H./Ph.D.)

Focus Areas/Tracks

- Archaeology
- Biological Anthropology
- Cultural Anthropology
- Medical Anthropology

Optional Concentrations

- Archaeological and Forensic Sciences
- Biocultural Medical Anthropology
- Cultural Resource Management
- Heritage Studies

Application Deadline:
Dec. 15, for Fall Admission Only

For more information, please visit our website
<http://anthropology.usf.edu/>

Or contact: Dr. Heide Castañeda
Graduate Director
hcastaneda@usf.edu